Benjamin's Parasite Jeff Strand 2018-05-21 At any given moment, the human body contains millions of parasites. This is the story of just one. A really, really nasty one. Benjamin Wilson was having stomach pains a month even before the stomach pains began. He was about to turn forty. One of his students was shot while on a homicidal meat cleaver rampage. And shortly after the funeral, Benjamin didn't feel good... Now everything is changing. His body is being affected in some very unpleasant ways. His personality is developing a few "quirks." But the biggest change is that he has a bunch of evil, psychotic people trying to hunt him down to acquire the parasite. His only hope is Julie, a gonzo bounty hunter who may or may not have Benjamin's best interests in mind, and who may or may not be competent enough to help him anyway. Jeff Strand, author of Dead Clown Barbecue, Wolf Hunter, and Blister, delivers his most outrageous adventure yet--an over-the-top mix of gruesome body horror and wacky road trip comedy.

Dead Clown Barbecue Jeff Strand 2013-03 From the author of Pressure, Dweller, and Wolf Hunter.

comes a new 90,000-word short story collection featuring twenty-nine stories and original artwork by Alex McVey. The stories within this collection range from hilarious to downright disturbing, proving that Jeff Strand is still a master of comedic horror. Seven of the stories ("Pett Semm", "Dummy", "True Hero", "Fangboy and the Troll", "Stop Stabbing Me", "Pregnancy Test", and "Push Button") have never been published and were written just for this book. Contains interior illustrations by artist Alex McVey. A man who finds a severed nose on a plate on his dining room table. A bellhop who summons Satan (maybe). Casual Fridays at work that get out of control. A cheery outlook on a post-apocalyptic landscape. The final thoughts of a doomed skydiver. A girl punished by having to sleep in a bed with her grandmother's corpse. Revenge via baking a tarantula into a cake. A romance between a man and a carnivorous genetically enhanced plant. And the lost tale of Fangboy. These are only a few of the demented stories in DEAD CLOWN BARBECUE, a collection of twenty-nine gleefully macabre tales, seven of which were written just for this collection. There's even a brand new one about a vegetable dummy. Those things creep you out, right? You'll laugh. You'll scream. Okay...you probably won't actually scream, unless you already had issues before you started reading, but you might cringe a little spooked. "No author working today comes close to Jeff Strand's perfect mixture of comedy and terror." - Cemetery Dance

Ferocious Jeff Strand 2019-03-22 From the Bram Stoker Award-nominated author of THE HAUNTED FOREST TOUR and WOLF HUNT comes another action-packed over-the-top creature feature! Rusty Moss has raised his niece Mia since she was a baby. Now that she's almost eighteen, he's worried that the life he's given her--living off the grid in a cabin deep in the woods--is holding her back from her potential. But that angst gets pushed aside when the undead forest animals arrive. At first it's a squirrel--shockingly violent and almost impossible to kill. Followed by a grizzly bear, also aggressive and resilient, even when point-blank shotgun blasts to the face are involved. Now the cabin is surrounded by all manner of zombie creatures. They have no way to call for help. The truck that would take them to safety is three miles away, stuck in the mud. But Rusty and Mia have their courage and have their wits. And, most importantly, they have an axe and a fully fueled chainsaw...

Bring Her Back Jeff Strand 2018-05-21 Frank knows that he's creepy. There's nothing he can do about it. His creepiness--along with the fact that his father once killed eleven people in an office shooting--kept him from ever having a girlfriend. When he finally works up the nerve to ask Abigail out on a date after buying flowers from her every day for the past three months, he's sure she'll say no. Mia might even recoil or spit in his face. But she accepts his invitation. He's sure it must be a cruel prank. These two kind-hearted but weird souls have found each other, and Frank thinks his life is about to change for the better. But this is not a love story. This is a tale of revenge and madness. From the author of PRESSURE, BLISTER, and SICK HOUSE comes Jeff Strand's darkest novel yet. "BRING HER BACK is like a Jack Ketchum novel packed with dark humor." - Michael McBride, author of SUBHUMAN

Wolf Hunt Jeff Strand 2020-02-09 George and Lou used to be thugs for hire. Now they're living in a shack in Costa Rica, hiding from the crime lord who wants them dead. Their last job, to deliver a werewolf in a cage, went...badly. But they can't hide out forever, and when they're finally captured, it seems as if George and Lou's ultimate fate will involve being doused in gasoline and set aflame. But they're given a second chance. There's another werewolf out there. This time, it's Ally, a fourteen-year-old girl. Kidnapping a teenaged girl is a major conflict with George and Lou's moral code, but they aren't fans of being brutally executed, so they agree to the job. After all, the crime lord doesn't kill Ally--he just wants her to bite him. They'll snatch her, deliver her as promised, and then do everything they can to return her home safely. She doesn't even know she's a werewolf; it's not until she'll create any complications by transforming. Of course, this is George and Lou, so there are always many complications. The worst of which is that they've now enraged three other extremely nasty werewolves...

I Have a Bad Feeling About This Jeff Strand 2014-03-01 Wilderness Survival Tip #1 Drinking your sweat will not save your life. Somebody might have told you that, but they were trying to find a way to really do it. Henry Lambert would rather play video games than spend time in the great outdoors, and that doesn't make him a wuss. Skinny nerd? Fine. But wuss is a little harsh. Sadly, his dad does it. Which is why Henry is being shipped off to Strongwoods Survival Camp. Strongwoods isn't exactly advertised. It looks like the victim of a zombie apocalypse, the "camp director" is a psycho drill sergeant, and Henry's sure he saw a sign written in blood... Wilderness Survival Tip #2 In case of an avalanche, don't despair. You're doomed, but that's a wicked cool death. Wilderness Survival Tip #3 If you're relying on this book for actual survival tips, you're dead already. Praise for Jeff Strand's Day For Voodoo: "A delightfully ludicrous read."—School Library Journal "Just the thing for teenagers and wiseacres."—Booklist "[A] free-wheeling dark comedy that starts off running and doesn't stop until its plausibility is exhausted. Sam Raimi fans should eat it up."—Publishers Weekly Clowns Vs. Spiders Jeff Strand 2019-09-19 Jaunty the Clown just wants to entertain families with lighthearted slapstick antics, but people think of clowns as terrifying, nightmarish creatures who hide in closets or under beds. When Jaunty, along with his fellow performers Guffaw, Wagon, Reginald, Pleasant Clown, and Bluehead are fired from the circus, they're told that the world just doesn't need clowns anymore. Still, clowns have to eat. And since these clowns don't eat children, to make ends meet they're eventually forced to take a job in a popular haunted attraction, the Mountain of Terror. Instead of charming entertainers, they're now scary clowns. A zombie clown. A demon clown. A creepy clown. But the town is about to discover something more frightening than clowns. Because one night, millions of oversized spiders emerge from a cave and begin their deadly invasion... From Bram Stoker Award-nominated author Jeff Strand comes an insane mix of shameless silliness and gory, creepy-crawly horror. Clowns Vs. Spiders. Who will win?

Taking Power John Foran 2005-11-17 Taking Power analyzes the causes behind some three dozen revolutions in the Third World between 1910 and the present. It advances a theory that seeks to integrate the political, economic, and cultural factors that brought these revolutions about, a structural theorizing with original ideas on culture and agency. It attempts to explain why so many revolutions have succeeded, while so many have failed. The book is divided into chapters that analyze particular sets of revolutions including the great social revolutions of Mexico 1910, China 1949, Cuba 1959, Iran 1979, and Nicaragua 1979, the anticolonial revolutions in Algeria, Vietnam, Angola, Mozambique, and Zimbabwe from the 1940s to the 1970s, and the failed revolutionary attempts in El Salvador, Peru, and elsewhere. It closes with speculation about the future of revolutions in an era of globalization, with special attention to Chiapas, the post-September 11 world, and the global justice movement.

Mandibles Jeff Strand 2003 Horror, thrills, and chills abound when plus-size ants take over a small town in this 2002 Dream Realm Award Finalist for Best Horror novel.

Blister Jeff Strand 2021-02-22 They call her Blister. She's a hideously disfigured twenty-three-year-old woman, living in a shed next to her father's house, hidden away from the world. Jason Tray is a successful cartoonist, banished to his agent's lakeside cabin for a few days of mandatory rest and relaxation. One night, while hanging out with a couple of the locals at a dive bar, he takes them up on their offer to go "see Blister," having no idea what they're talking about. He peeks through the window and sees the most nightmarish thing he's ever seen. In the morning, he wakes up, hung over and regretting everything better than this. He needs to...apologize? From the Bram Stoker Award-nominated author of PRESSURE, DWELLER, and WOLF HUNT comes a tale of fiendish secrets, ghastly crimes, and horrible monsters. "Impossible to put down, rich with character and humor, BLISTER explodes off the page."

Peter Adam Salomon, Bram Stoker Award-nominated author of All Those Broken Angels and Graverobbers Wanted (No Experience Necessary) Jeff Strand 2005-03-01 When a man desperate for money accepts $20,000 to retrieve a key buried with a body in a shallow grave--and the body may be alive, armed, and dangerous--he realizes that he should have held out for more money.

Target Centred Virtue Ethics Christine Swanton 2021-04-15 Virtue ethics in its contemporary manifestation is dominated by neo Aristotelian virtue ethics primarily developed by Rosalind Hursthouse. This version of eudaimonistic virtue ethics was ground breaking, but has been subject to considerable critical attention. Christine Swanton shows that the time is ripe for new developmental alternatives. The target centred virtue ethics proposed by Swanton is opposed to orthodox virtue ethics in two major ways. First, it rejects the 'natural goodness' metaphysics of Neo Aristotelian virtue ethics owed to Philippa Foot in favour of a 'hermeneutic ontology' of ethics inspired by the Continental European tradition and McDowell. Second, it rejects the well-known 'qualified agent' account of right action made famous by Hursthouse in favour of a target centred framework for assessing rightness. Swanton develops the target centred view with discussions of Dancy's particularism, default moral principles, thick concepts, codifiability, and its relation to the Doctrine of the mean. Target Centred Virtue Ethics retains the pluralism of Virtue Ethics: A Pluralistic View (2003) but develops it further in relation to a pluralistic account of practical reason. This study develops other substantive positions including the view that target centred virtue ethics is developmental, suitably embedded in an environment of "dwelling"; and incorporates a concept of differentiated virtue to allow for roles, narrativity, context, and historical location, and stage of life.

A Bad Day for Voodoo Jeff Strand 2012-06-01 When your best friend is just a tiny bit psychotic, you should never actually believe him when he says, "Trust me. This is gonna be awesome." Of course you probably wouldn't believe a voodoo doll could work either. Or that it could cause someone's leg to clean off with one quick prick. But I've seen it. It can happen. And when there's suddenly a doll floating around out there—a doll that could be snatched by a Rottweiler and torn to shreds, or a thug ready to torch it, or any random family of cannibals (really, do you need the danger here?—well, you know that's just gonna be a really bad day ... "Jeff Strand is hilariously funny and truly deranged." —Christopher Golden, author of When Rose Wakes Pressure Jeff Strand 2021-04-24 "Marvelously creepy reading...the horror in this tale of twisted friendship is relentless." -Publishers Weekly Alex stared at the red pocketknife shown to him by his daughter. A pocketknife owned by somebody he hadn't seen in years... CHILDREN They met first at boarding school at age twelve. Alex Fletcher, shy and scared. Darren Rust, always furiously scribbling away in a private journal. It was not an immediate friendship, but then one night Darren convinced his roommate to sneak off school grounds to see something glorious. There was a sleazy strip club and every once in a while the back door opened just long enough to maybe catch a quick glimpse. Though a bond was formed from their pre-pubescent interest in naked women, Darren had another interest. A morbid curiosity about death. A curiosity that turned into something much more sinister. FRIENDS They crossed paths again in college and became the best of friends. But Darren was always looking for a friend. He had dark, ghastly urges squirming around in his head, and he believed in the same things—the urge to hurt, the urge to kill—in Alex. He was looking for somebody who understood. A partner. But Alex could never become a monster. Not even when Darren tried to bring out his most deeply buried feelings of rage. Not even when Darren tried to show him the euphoria of having so much power over another human being. It just couldn't happen...right? ENEMIES Now Alex has a daughter and a daughter. And Darren is back. He's hiding. He's patient. His mind is twisted in the worst way. And he's seeking a soulmate.

Why Love Hurts Eva Illouz 2013-05-20 Few of us have been spared the agonies of intimate relationships. They come in many shapes: loving a man or a woman who will not commit to us, being heartbroken when we're abandoned by a lover, engaging in Sisyphean internet searches, coming home lonely from bars, parties, or blind dates, feeling bored in a relationship that is so much less than we envisaged - these are only some of the ways in which the search for love is a difficult and often painful experience. Despite the widespread and almost collective character of these experiences, our culture insists they are the result of faulty or insufficiently mature psyches. For many, the Freudian idea that family designs the pattern of an individual's erotic career has been the main explanation for why we fail to find or sustain love. Psychoanalysis and popular psychology have succeeded spectacularly in convincing us that individuals bear responsibility for the misery of their romantic and erotic lives. The purpose of this book is to change our way of thinking about what is wrong in our relationships. The problem is not dysfunctional childhoods or insufficiently self-aware psyches, but rather the institutional forces shaping how we love. The argument of this book is that the modern romantic experience is shaped by a fundamental transformation in the ecology and architecture of romantic choice. The samples from which men and women choose a partner, the modes of evaluating prospective partners, the very importance of choice and autonomy and what people imagine to be the spectrum of their choices: all these aspects of choice have transformed the very core of the way we want a partner, the sense of worth bestowed by relationships, and the organization of desire. It does to love what Marx did to commodities: it shows that it is shaped by social relations and that it circulates in a marketplace of unequal actors.

Radical Technologies Adam Greenfield 2017-06-13 A field manual to the technologies that are transforming our lives Everywhere we turn, a startling new device promises to transfigure our lives at what cost? In this urgent and revelatory excavation of our Information Age, leading technology thinker Adam Greenfield forces us to reconsider our relationship with the networked objects, spaces, and spaces that define us. It is time to re-evaluate the Silicon Valley consensus determining that we already depend on the smartphone to navigate every aspect of our existence. We're told that innovations—from augmented-reality interfaces and virtual assistants to autonomous delivery drones and self-driving cars—will make life easier, more convenient and more productive. 3D printing promises unprecedented control over the form and distribution of matter, while the blockchain stands poised to revolutionize everything from the recording and exchange of value to the way we organize the realities of the day to day. And, all the while, fiendishly complex algorithms are operating quietly in the background, reshaping the economy, transforming the fundamental terms of our politics and culture, and redefining what it means to be human. Having successfully colonized everyday life, these radical technologies are now conditioning the choices available to us in the years to come. How do they affect us? What challenges do they present to us, as individuals and societies? Who benefits from their use? In answering these questions, Greenfield's timely guide clarifies the scale and nature of the changes we now confront —and offers ways to reclaim our stake in the future.

Akhenaten Naguib Mahfouz 2008-11-26 From the winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature and of the Cairo Trilogy, comes Akhenaten, a fascinating work of fiction about the most infamous ancient Egypt. In this beguiling novel, originally published in Arabic in 1985, Mahfouz tells with extraordinary insight the story of the "heretic pharaoh," or "sun king,"--the first known monotheist ruler--whose iconoclastic and controversial reign during the 18th Dynasty (1540-1307 B.C.) has an uncanny resonance with modern sensibilities. Narrating the novel is a young man with a passion for truth, who questions the pharaoh's contemporaries after his horrible death--including Akhenaten's closest friends, his most bitter enemies, and finally his enigmatic wife, Nefertiti--in an effort to discover what really happened in those strange, dark days at Akhenaten's court. As our narrator and other subjects he interviews contribute their version of Akhenaten, "the truth" becomes increasingly elusive and evanescent. Akhenaten encompasses all of the contradictions his subjects see in him: at once empathic, feminine and barbaric, mad and divinely inspired, his character, as Mahfouz imagines it, is eerily modern, and fascinatingly ethereal. An ambitious and exceptionally lucid and accessible novel, Akhenaten is a work only Mahfouz could render so elegantly, so irresistibly.

The Writing LifeJeff Strand 2020-12-10 Jeff Strand, whose work Publishers Weekly has called "wickedly funny" and Kirkus has called "ridiculously stupid," has had one of the least meteoric teenagers...an evil without a name: It. Welcome to Derry, Maine. It's a small city, a place as familiar as your own hometown. Only in Derry the haunting is real. They were seven teenagers who first stumbled upon the horror. Now they are grown-up men and women who have gone to the big world to gain success and happiness. But the promise they made twenty-eight years ago is to reunite in the same place where, as teenagers, they battled an evil creature that preyed on the town's children. Now, children are being murdered again and their repressed memories of that terrifying summer return as they prepare to once again battle the monster lurking in Derry's sewers. Readers of Stephen King know that Derry, Maine, is a place with a deep, dark hold on the author. It reappears in many of his books, including Bag of Bones, Hearts in Atlantis, and 11/22/63. But it all starts with It, "Stephen King's most mature work" (St. Petersburg Times), "It will overwhelm you...to be read in a lit room only" (Los Angeles Times).
